

Sequencing steps in recipes and arguments in an argumentative text

To sequence (put in order) the various steps in a cooking recipe, I can use the following sequencers: first (for the 1st step); next/ then; after that; finally (for the last step).

Example: If you want to make a healthy strawberry and banana smoothie, first place a few strawberries and half a banana in blender. Next, add a glass of skimmed milk and the content of low-fat, sugar-free natural yogurt pot. After that, pulse until fruit is well blended. Finally, pour into a glass and enjoy!

To sequence (put in order) the various arguments in an argumentative text, I can use the following sequencers: first/ firstly (for the 1st argument); second/ secondly (for the 2nd argument); third/ thirdly (for the 3rd argument; etc.) I can also use: the first, the second, the third point/ argument is ...

Example: Charity work is very useful activity for the community for many reasons. First/ Firstly, it is a universal human value. Second/ Secondly, it helps to strengthen community bonds. Third/ Thirdly, the government alone cannot solve all the social problems; all citizens should take part in relieving the suffering of the poor, the disabled and the homeless.

NOTE: (Firstly/ Secondly/ Thirdly, etc.) are more formal than (First/ Second/ Third, etc.)

1. Charity:

Charity is the act of giving help to those in need of it. It is a humanitarian act. It involves giving money, goods or time and effort to those who need it. It is done without expecting something in return. Most charities are concerned with providing basic needs, such as food, water, clothing, health care and shelter. The most common form of charity is donating money. The money is then used to buy these basic needs. However, there are many other actions that may be performed as charity, such as teaching orphans, donating blood, or money to help fund medical research. Charitable giving can be a responsibility in many religions. This kind of charity is called almsgiving or alms. In Islam, for example, it is called "zakat". It is one of the five most important duties of being a Muslim. It is then an accepted practice to give whatever is possible in charity for the welfare of the people and the society.

Charity is the act of giving and expecting nothing in return.

It could be defined as an act of kindness and humanity which is demonstrated by many activities such as helping the needy with food, clothes or even words and prayer, in other words, to give comfort to people. It can also be performed with donating money, blood or even clothes while some people prefer to volunteer for charity work.

In conclusion, I believe we should carve charity work in the future generations' characters so that we can spread happiness all around the world.

Charity is a desire of the heart to help other in distress and to think good of others. It is one kind of noble human quality. It makes our heart bountiful. It is an expression of love for human beings and the creation of Allah. Charity comes to mitigate the sufferings of humanity. It aims at improving the condition of the poor. This quality brings happiness on earth, strengthens the ties of relationship among people, removes enmity and creates fellow-feeling. There are various ways of practicing charity. The practice of giving alms is an act of charity. Charity should be extended to assist the really needy. It shouldn't be measured by money, whereas it should be measured by the sacrifice one makes. Charity shouldn't be given only for show and fame. There is a proverb that says "Charity begins at home". Therefore, we should practise the habit of charity at home. We should be sympathetic to others and inspire our children to achieve this noble virtue.

A good Citizen

How can we call someone a good citizen? It's not easy to answer a question like this; however, let's agree that if you are a good person, you will be a good citizen. A good person is someone who is aware of his rights, duties and responsibilities towards his family, his neighbors, his friends and his community in general. (1)

I believe that there are many things that reflect your principles as a good citizen in your country. When you help people and volunteer to provide your services to them on your own free will, in this case, you are a good citizen. When you help the poor and pay money for charities and orphanages, you are a good citizen. When you follow the rules of traffic and government laws in general, you are a good citizen.

A good citizen loves helping the old and young people. He treats them with respect and preserves the dignity of others. A good citizen knows his rights which should never violate the rights of others. A good citizen hates disrespecting others' opinion and faith because respecting them is an important part of being a good citizen. Citizenship is a huge responsibility and a burden on the shoulder of every faithful and selfless citizen in his country. (2)
