Expressing strong advice and recommendations: Should- had better – ought to Should-had-better-ought-to are used to express strong advice or recommendation and function similarly to modal verbs (they must be followed by a stem).

Affirmative form	Negative form	Interrogative form
Should	Should not	Should (I) ... ?
Had better	Had better not	/
Ought to	Ought not to	/

Ex:

1- a- Authorities should fight corruption as soon as possible

b- Authorities had better fight corruption as soon as possible a- It is recommended for Algerian government to fight the illicit practices.

b- Algerian government ....

it's Time Algerian you fought

Note: We can also use had better instead of these expressions: It is advisable (that), it is advised (that) it is recommended (that), it would be advisable (that)- If I were you, I would

— it's a good thing for/مثل

Ex:

- a- It would be advisable if you think carefully before choosing a job.

b- You had better think carefully before choosing a job.

   a- If I were you, I would visit a doctor
   b- You had better visit a doctor
