Child Labour Causes

Child Labour has recently become one of the biggest issues in the world. It is any work ~~any work~~ that harms children's mental and psychical health. The increasing rate of this abuse in our country is due to several reasons.

First, as we all know the major reason behind children's work at an early age is poverty. When the families don't have enough money to provide the necessary needs, they oblige their kids to work so that they can survive and fulfill their needs such as food, clothes and health care. Secondly, the lack of schools and transportation lead children to drop out of schools at an early age and go to work in hard jobs. In addition, the lack of control and a weak law allow businessmen and companies to exploit young children in danger field and with a very low wages.

To sum up, eradicating this abuse is not only the responsibility of the authorities, but we are concerned with.

The Effects of Child Labour

Child labor is an unethical and criminal act that involves the exploitation of children at a young age in highly difficult jobs with no rights and a very low wage. This abuse has a wide range of consequences on children and society.

To start with, it affects the children's mental and physical health because working in heavy manual jobs and inadequate places such as factories, farms, and plantations and breathing noxious fumes affect in a negative way on their safety. Also, Child labour help in increasing the school dropout rate because children start giving much importance to work rather than studying and that's why they leave schools at early ages. Moreover, it deprives the innocent children from their childhood, their rights to play and study with their mates.

To conclude with, child labour damage and destroys the bright future of children and society as well. Thus, it's high time we made hand in hand to stop this abuse.

How Can we Stop Child Labour

Child labor is the employment of children under an age determined by law or custom. It has recently become one of the challenges that threaten the future of our children and country; therefore some effective urgent measures must be formulated.

To begin with, the government ought to pass strict laws against businessmen and companies which employ children. They must be punished severely by increasing the penalty and impose heavy fines. Furthermore, we must prioritize education through building more schools, providing transportation and free-restaurants in schools. Additionally, since the major cause of child labor is poverty, it would be advisable if the government raises the wage rate for parents so that they can afford the necessary school supplies for their children, and they won't be obliged to work.

In short, to save the future of the children and the country, both society and the government must unite to fight this phenomenon.
